Today we have The CryptoMouse here to go over automated business ideas. Yet another way to earn money on the internet without the standard complaint of “no idea what to do”. Outside the separate section that says BTB Notes/Comments all writing is from CryptoMouse.

Welcome Avatar! A cartoon mouse here to talk about automation ideas for Wifi Money.

Caveat upfront: as Fox alluded to in his post (LINK), many AI products popular currently are a solution in search of a problem, with overengineering rampant.

You do not need to rustle up a flame thrower to take down an ant hill.

Do you need yet another “agent wrapper” on an existing AI product for business use case abc? Likely not.

That being said, we should take note of how certain tools can be used to spin up digital money streams much quicker than in years past.

And for those of us who have been in the game awhile, the recent developments feel like lightyear improvements from the months/years of broken glass you had to get through 10+ years ago. We are not even 15 years out since IBM Watson’s 2011 Jeopardy win (LINK: <https://www.axios.com/2021/02/13/ibm-watson-jeopardy-win-language-processing>).

At the time of this writing, there is not yet an agent solution you can take off of a Github repo and launch to earn millions in five minutes.

That being said, consider this post as a framework to start thinking about how you can approach the existing game from different angles.

Pieces you can use as legos to put together to start a new/additional flywheel.

Keep in mind this part is not optional if you want to play in the WiFi Money space. Like all tech advances, the easier these tools make things, the more commoditized approaches become. If you need further proof of this, look up a keyword on YouTube and check out the clearly AI generated content that is taking over most niches these days.

But say you find a working aff offer that is gaining organic traction? Use the various tools available now to mimic additional content creation ASAP and spin up additional channels stat. Money loves speed, and we are now able to pivot even faster once we find a new angle to copy new inspiration.

But before we launch into our deep dive of what we can automate today, let's go through a quick AI refresh.

Quick Background

As Fox also mentioned, this space moves exponentially fast. Not months fast, hours fast. Wish that was an exaggeration. My theory that no real new web3 infra has come through this cycle is because all of our brightest minds are focused on Singularity. What does this really mean?

Knowledge is essentially free. Teams are iterating in a space that has no real moat at the moment. Every OpenAI, Deepseek, Anthropic release has 1 or 20 clones very quickly after their publication, with self-hosted, free options usually following shortly thereafter.

Excited to introduce the Perplexity Deep Research Agent: available for free to all users. Paid users only need to pay $20/mo to access an expert level researcher on any topic for 500 daily queries, and need to wait less than three minutes for getting a full research report.

And with so much available research wise, whether from universities (Stanford, Princeton, et al, LINK: <https://github.com/stanford-oval/storm>) or companies (Anthropic, OpenAI, Deepseek, et al, LINK: <https://huggingface.co/datasets/open-r1/OpenR1-Math-220k>), teams are recreating results as soon as metrics are published to back into results as quickly as possible.

Note, Hugging Face just released their agents course for free if that is of interest to you (LINK).

I saw a line a bit ago that said information overload is the new poverty (LINK), and that can feel very true. Just so much to absorb, all the time, a jungle anon has to have priorities locked in to not lose focus. But moving on.

Are we at the inflection point where models can teach themselves? And improve their own results? Maybe, jury seems to be out, YT personalities have a tag line of “THIS IS IT!” almost daily.

So... how true is it for us plebians? Not likely.

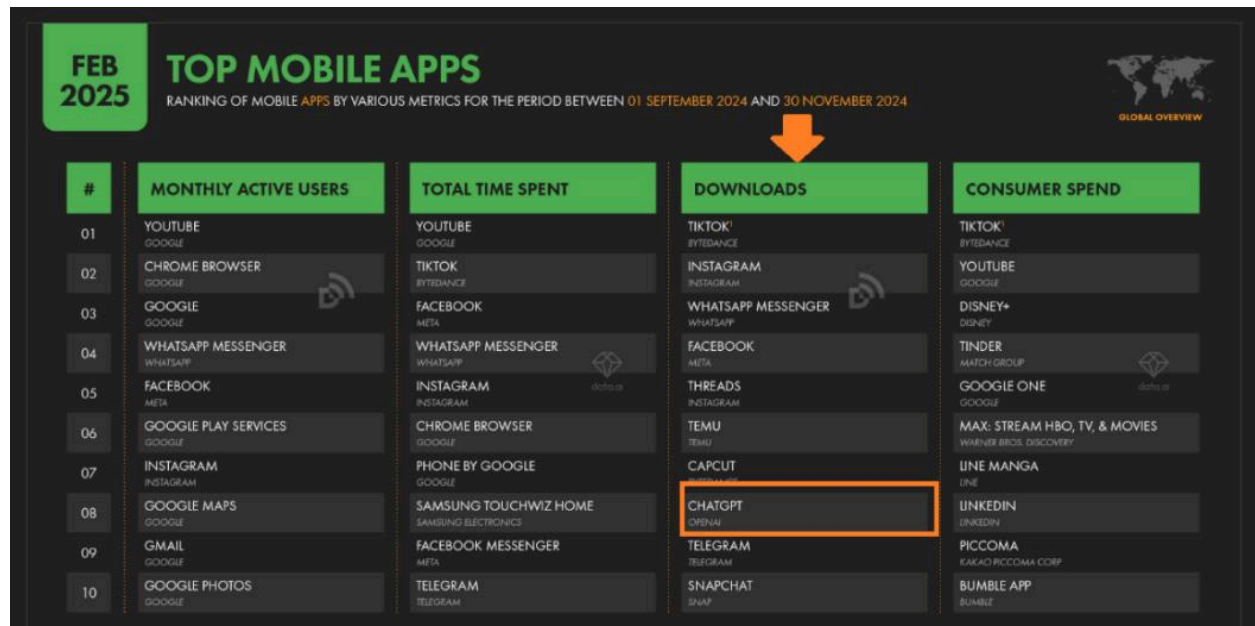

Regardless, for the purposes of WiFi money, we do not need to care.

Anyone who says all of this is unnecessary heart burn has a point, but part of earning online is to know where you are, so you can identify where you want to go.

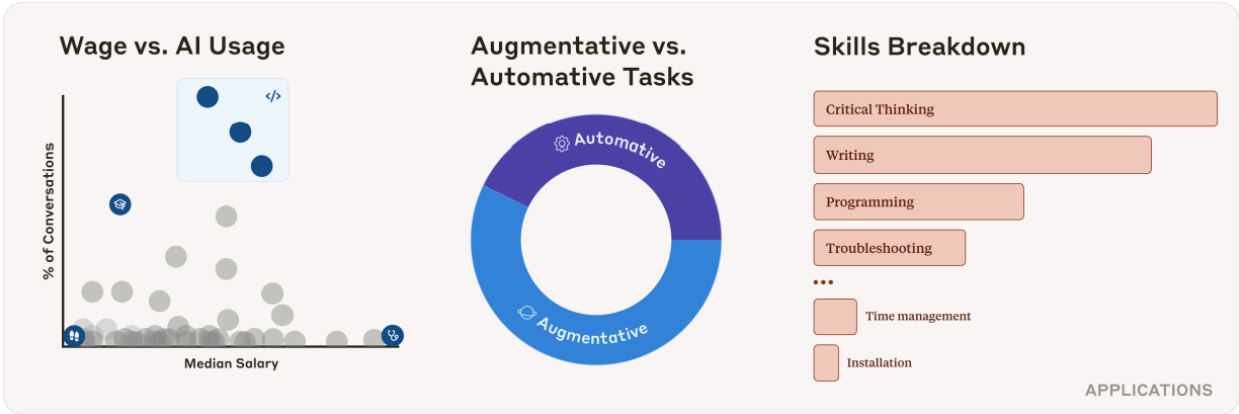

Three salient points:

- ChatGPT is one of the most downloaded apps (LINK).
- No matter what business celebrities talking points may be, or what management teams are telling their benches, the data itself clearly shows which way we are headed (LINK), and
- And as Anthropic mentioned in the paper they just released (LINK).

“...usage of AI extends more broadly across the economy, with ~ 36% of occupations using AI for at least a quarter of their associated tasks. We also analyze how AI is being used for tasks, finding 57% of usage suggests augmentation of human capabilities (e.g., learning or iterating on an output) while 43% suggests automation (e.g., fulfilling a request with minimal human involvement).”

Combine this with Altman’s “$0.50 of compute for $5k worth of work” line (LINK), and you can start to zoom out here and see even if we aren’t yet at the push button inflection point of every jungle anon clicking a few more buttons to add digital streams of income, exponentially, on loop, it is not that far off, and these repos being forked on GitHub may be even more popular soon (LINK), although the latest PRs on this repo are not at all surprising (LINK).

Let's Get Into It

What is this cartoon mouse tracking and how does it relate to the BTB classic, Efficiency?

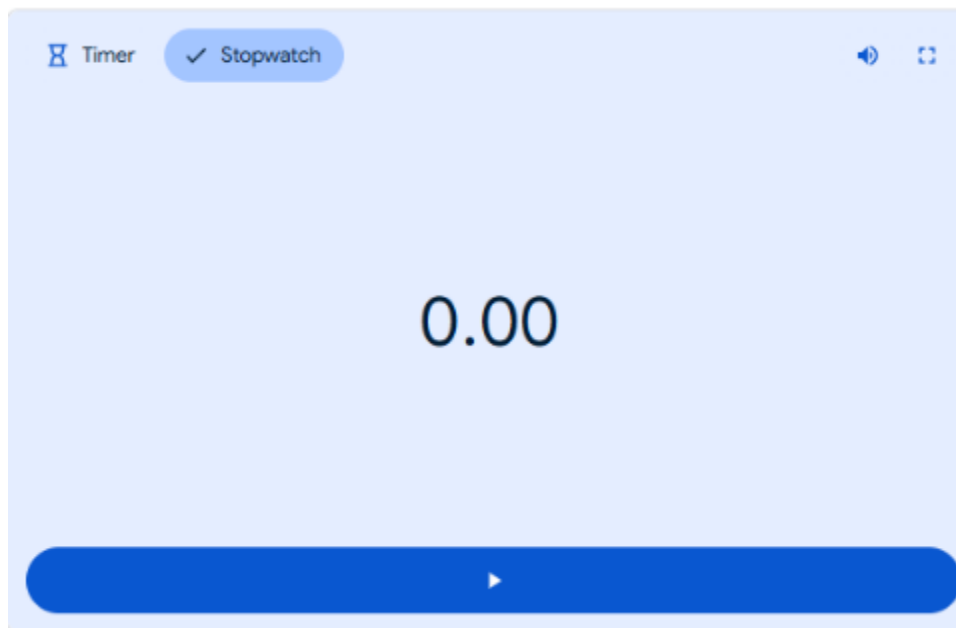

Let's say you may have launched a brand or three, maybe you made a couple of shekels, maybe you burned through $25k painfully fast. Either way, no better way to learn the basics, as they can be applied today, than to go back to the start and get another rep in on the affiliate side, especially when agents will be replacing bots soon.

We are going to focus on three things:

1. Automated Content Creation/Repurposing
2. Automated Ad Creation/Review
3. Automated Traffic, scaling as fast as possible

Want to click buttons alongside as you have this post read aloud on your Substack app? Let's see how quickly we can speed run this and have an affiliate offer researched, content created and queued for automatic posting/traffic.

Starting a stopwatch in browser, here we go:

Let's go to perplexity (I use this all the time, AI search, has been really helpful for me, YMMV), and ask what the most profitable affiliate niches are (LINK). In seconds I have a laundry list to choose from, no surprises here. Let's go with Bezos. I already have an Amazon Associates account,

I assume most of BTB's readers riding along do too, but if not, it takes a day or two to get approval, see more info here (LINK).

Answer

Based on recent data and trends, some of the most profitable and popular affiliate offers in 2025 include:

1. Amazon Associates: Offers 1-20% commission rates across a wide range of products, with Amazon Games providing up to 20% commission ⁴.
2. Fiverr Affiliates: Provides 25-70% commission on first orders and 10% on future orders, with particularly high rates for promoting top freelance talent ⁴.
3. Liquid Web: Offers a 150% commission rate with a minimum of $150 per referral, making it highly lucrative for affiliates in the web hosting niche ⁵.
4. HubSpot: Provides a 30% recurring commission for up to one year on new paying customers, ideal for affiliates in the CRM and digital marketing space ² ³.
5. Semrush: Offers between $200-$350 for every sale and $10 for free trial sign-ups, with a generous 120-day cookie duration ³.
6. Cloudways: Features two commission models, with potential earnings up to $125 per sale or a hybrid model of $30 CPA plus 7% recurring lifetime commission ².
7. Kinsta: Pays at least $1M in commissions yearly, offering both one-time payouts and recurring monthly commissions for hosting services ³.

These programs span various niches including e-commerce, freelancing, web hosting, CRM, digital marketing, and technology, which are among the most profitable sectors for affiliate marketing in 2025 ⁷. The high commission rates, long cookie durations, and recurring commission structures make these offers particularly attractive to affiliates seeking substantial earnings potential.

Perplexity

Time check? Almost 2.5 minutes, our research is done, we have an affiliate platform, a niche selected, a product to push, and content we can use as a template

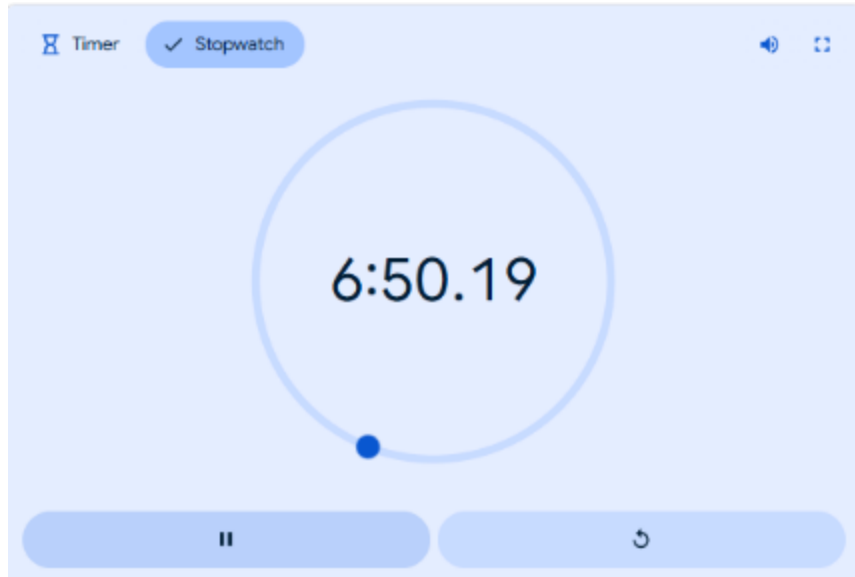

Next step, I am going to ChatGPT to create content similar to the videos above. Won't give a total step by step here on that, since it is really straight forward, but I use CapCut and Canva as needed (both have GPT integrations). Export and then we're ready to roll.

Done, content is created and ready for cross posting, and we are the 5-minute mark. Will this take you a couple of clicks longer if you haven't done it yet or in a while? Sure, but not much longer.

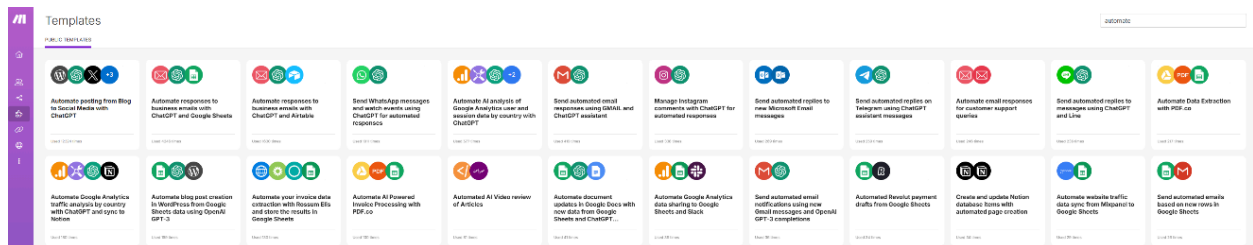

Now then, if you want something more plug and play, I've been messing with Ad creative (Source) lately (not an endorsement, just interesting to see what's on there). In a couple of clicks, you can get insights into what competitors are doing and get similar creatives done and launched. Worth looking into if you're curious and won't take that much more time, but when UGC (user generated content) is often considered more authentic and may sell faster in some verticals, this may be too corporate for some plays.

At the under seven minute mark, even with that annoying adcreative.ai detour:

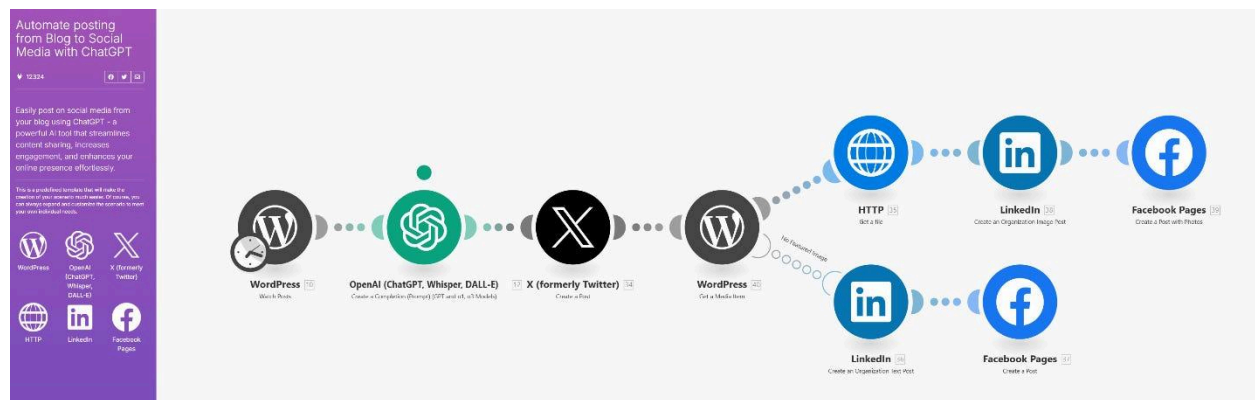

So let's move onto traffic. I have workflows on make.com, which I have mentioned before, to set up content posting/cross posting, to make sure I always have eyes I can sell to in my usual verticals. I won't list the exact make templates here, but check out these public workflows for “automate” as examples: (source)

More specifically this one (LINK).

Is this all necessary when you can schedule directly from GPT (LINK)?

Not at all, but I have custom triggers set up for my offers/SKUs which help cut down on my back and forth. Once you go through a few of these, you'll figure out what is least annoying for you/most impactful.

So in this example for the AA play, I would ad my creatives for reference/linking to existing/new posts to ensure eyes were on my latest offer. It takes about 7 additional clicks, but let's check the clock. Came in just under ten minutes. Not too bad.

Closing Thoughts

Hope this was helpful. In minutes now, we can research and launch additional Wifi $ channels, and set up workstreams for automatic content creation.

Is this a perfect roadmap? No.

Will a cartoon animal make five million USTT off referrals for someone else's a red light therapy device? Not likely.

But can you do hundreds a month USTT very quickly with 10 minutes of focused effort, all while learning what the marketplace finds interesting and worth buying? Yes.

All intel you can use to spin up your next brand too.

And sure, there are manual connections I have to do right now (my searching perplexity at the start, my setting up an Amazon Associates, and social channels, my setting up make.com workflows, et al).

Zoom out: having an agent trained on this process, who can understand this workflow from a to z, and can iterate on its own, could be very powerful. I have no clue when this will be a reality for us in the jungle, but I will not be caught flat footed. Think I just gave myself another project to work on.

But then again, what do I know? I'm just a cartoon mouse who can't even find a tent these days.

Back to the sewer.

Grateful once again to BTB for giving me the space to write here. Hope you found this helpful, you can find me sometimes posting/RT-ing on X FKA Twitter The CryptoMouse

As always, shoot me a DM if you find yourself stuck, always happy to help out the jungle. Will do my best to catch up as quickly as I can on DMs, and make sure you are on my (severely unhinged, not posting often) mailing list.

BTB Notes

From what we've seen, everyone has gotten addicted to fast money. They see fake screen caps and think they can turn $5,000 into $1M in a year. We're finally entering into a period where the masses somewhat woke up (after the Trump, Melania and Milei rugs).

All of these memes were just funneling profits to insiders and back door deals. We're not surprised but the idea of getting rich quick is something normies dream about. Hopes and dreams are powerful.

Standard Build or Die: This calculated approach is a way for anyone with real interest in WiFi money to begin in the green. Again. There is no way you make $5,000,000 a year doing this (as CryptoMouse states) but it's a way to remove excuses.

Spin up a handful of them, make $3-5K a month and finally send the message to your brain synapses that online income is the best way out of the W-2 rat race. (we mentioned a couple years ago that we're even pro consulting businesses at this point. 99% of people just need to get over the hurdle that WiFi money is real).

"Can't Think of an Idea": The majority use this as some sort of coping mechanism to never try anything. Now? You can make small amounts of money with less than 10-15 minutes of effort. The reality is that people are lazy. Majority wouldn't even put in 10 minutes of effort if $500/month was guaranteed ($6,000 for 10 minutes and they would rather ask the Balding Boomer for a 3% raise instead).

Using Tech

Instead of looking at Automation as a boogie man, you should look at this with a glass half full perspective. If automation is coming and AI tools are coming, put yourself into a position of strength. The only way to do this is by utilizing the tools for your own biz and W-2 (if you still have one).

While everyone else is busy doing things the old fashioned way, you should be going in the exact opposite direction. Using all of these new products to automate all of your work. There is no way to convince us that people are actually working 60 hours per week. The vast majority of the time is meaningless socialization, meetings that could be summarized with a recording device and buying stuff on the internet.

As always it's up to you! Use new tech tools, get things wrong, learn, fix, get things wrong again, learn, fix and eventually figure it out. Or... Just pray that your hardwork will be rewarded one day:

Or the more comical one:

MY BOSS ARRIVED AT WORK IN A BRAND NEW FERRARI

I SAID: "Wow that's an amazing car."

HE REPLIED: If you work hard, put all your hours in, and strive for excellence, I'll get another one next year
